Three Israeli Objections
By GENE CURRIVANSpecial to THE NEW YORK TIMES.
New York Times (1857-Current file); Jul 3, 1948; ProQuest Historical Newspapers The New York Times (1851 - 2002)
pg. 4

Three Israeli Objections

By GENE CURRIVAN
Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

TEL AVIV, Israel, July 2—Most of the proposals of Count Folke Bernadotte, United Nations Mediator for Palestine, will be rejected by the Israeli Government because they are incompatible with the original pattern designed by the Security Council, according to informed sources here today.

Aside from the proposals, the Government is in the ludicrous position of not knowing whether the Arabs will recognize the state of Israel. This is basic, and if the Arabs refuse to accept the existence of sovereignty there is no ground for further discussion, observers say.

At the moment there is definite rejection of the proposals but there will be a special meeting of Parliament Sunday morning to consider the Government's reply and, possibly, to amend it. As it now stands the three principal proposals are not acceptable.

Reports from Cairo, Egypt, indicate that the Arabs feel the same way, but their feeling also apparently derives from the fundamental idea of accepting the Israeli state.

As far as Israeli elements are concerned the state has to be accepted and after that they are willing to follow the plan laid down by the Security Council, that is, Jerusalem as a neutral international zone, an Israeli state and an Arab state, with a common economic bloc welding all three.

Trans-Jordan Link Barred

This original conception, adopted after years of surveys and investigating commissions, apparently has been forgotten, political experts here contend. Instead there are the reported proposals of Count Bernadotte that immigration be restricted after a certain period and that a foreign alliance be established with Trans-Jordan.

There is not the slightest likelihood that Israeli elements who control almost 90 per cent of New Jerusalem will permit the Arab flag to fly over it. They will not accept immigration restrictions as long as they are an established state and they will not align themselves with Trans-Jordan whose army is British-led and subsidized by Britain.

There is another mutual element also that has entered into the picture and that is the accumulated strength since the truce period began. Both sides have had a breathing spell. The Arabs have consolidated their positions, received fresh funds and recruits and the Israeli forces have built up their reserves tremendously. It seems that neither one is afraid of the other and they want to fight it out rather than make embarrassing concessions.

Reproduced with permission of the copyright owner. Further reproduction prohibited without permission.