ARABS' NEW REGIME WILL AVOID POLITICS

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

CAIRO, Egypt, July 11—The provisional Palestine administration established by the Arab league Friday is not intended to deal with political questions but with essential local services, it was said today.

The league said today it hoped it would open a new era in which Palestinians would "direct their own affairs and assume the obligations of their independence."

The league undertook to provide a loan or grant and specified that the regime should follow the Arab League's directions in administering Palestinian territories held by Arab armies.

The exiled Mufti of Jerusalem, Haj Amin el-Husseini, who has long advocated the formation of an Arab government in Palestine, was not mentioned. The chairman will be Ahmed Hilmi Pasha, formerly treasurer of the Arab Higher Committee, of which the Mufti is chairman.

Among the members are three members of the Husseini family: Jamal el-Husseini for internal public security, Dr. Hussein Khalidi for health services and Raji Husseini for economics.

Others are Auñi Abdel Hadi Bey, social affairs; Suliman Tuqan Bey, communications; Michel Abkarius Bey, finance; Ali Hosna Bey, justice; Youssof Sayyoun, propaganda, and Amin Aqal, agriculture.
