Talks Held "Long Time Off"

CAIRO, Feb. 3 (UP) — Premier Aly Maher Pasha said today that negotiations with Britain on settlement of the Anglo-Egyptian dispute were "a long time off."

The Prime Minister made the statement when asked to comment on reports that Anglo-Egyptian negotiations might be resumed within a matter of days. He has indicated that Egypt is ready to consider any "reasonable" basis for settling the dispute, but his statement today made it clear that his Government was in no hurry to resume the talks.

Hassan el Hodeibi Bey, head of the Moslem Brotherhood, called on the new Premier today to outline the views of his organization on the present crisis. He told news men that the Prime Minister had not invited the brotherhood to join the new national front being formed to bolster the Government in any negotiations with Britain.
