King's Death May Bring Some Diplomatic Shifts
By The Associated Press
New York Times (1857-Current file); Feb 7, 1952; ProQuest Historical Newspapers The New York Times (1851 - 2003)
pg. 13

King's Death May Bring Some Diplomatic Shifts

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Feb. 6—Important diplomatic changes may follow in the wake of the death of King George VI and the accession of Elizabeth II to the throne.

All foreign envoys in this country will have to present new letters of credence to Elizabeth.

British Ambassadors and Ministers abroad will need to be reaccredited as representatives of the Queen.

Because of Britain's rift with Egypt over their joint rule of the Sudan, it is possible that the Egyptian Government will refuse the new credentials of Sir Ralph Stevenson, the British Ambassador in Cairo. The Egyptian Government has proclaimed King Farouk as monarch of the Sudan.

Governments in the past have taken advantage of a shift in British monarchs to make diplomatic changes. Abdication of Edward VIII led to King George VI's name being deleted from the Irish constitution and consequent abolition of the post of Governor-General.

Reproduced with permission of the copyright owner. Further reproduction prohibited without permission.