U. S. and Egypt Fix Point 4 Issues In New Notes Pledging Cooperation

CAIRO, Feb. 28 (Reuters)—Egypt has pledged political, economic and social cooperation with the United States, and the United States has promised to expand technical aid to Egypt, a Government spokesman disclosed tonight.

In an exchange of letters, Premier Aly Maher Pasha and United States Ambassador Jefferson Caffrey, emphasized the desire of both countries to cooperate fully with each other.

The exchange was considered a settlement of a difference over United States Point Four aid to under-developed countries.

[In a letter to Congress last Saturday, W. Averell Harriman, head of the United States Mutual Security Agency, said economic and technical assistance was being withheld from Egypt, among other countries because she had not complied with requirements of the Mutual Security Act. He said discussions for resumption of the aid were being held. It is believed that the withdrawal of aid was on a minor technical point.]

The Premier, in his letter to the Ambassador, stressed Egypt's eagerness to cooperate with the United States in the political, economic and social spheres in the interest of world peace.

Mr. Caffery replied that the United States Government welcomed full cooperation with Egypt.
