Washington Weighs Shift
Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.
New York Times (1857-Current file); Feb 26, 1954; ProQuest Historical Newspapers The New York Times (1851 - 2002)
pg. 3

Washington Weighs Shift

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25—United States officials expressed their confidence today that the removal of Maj. Gen. Mohammed Naguib as President and Premier of Egypt would not mean any weakening of the generally pro-Western attitude of the Cairo Government.

These authorities did show some concern, however, over the possibility that Lieut. Col. Gamal Nasser, while assuming the post of Premier, might not be able to command the popular support that had come to the colorful "iron man," hero of the Palestine war and symbol for many of the "new Egypt."

In the opinion of the experts, the ouster of General Naguib was the result of conflicts and irritation within the Revolution Council, the group that master-minded and carried out the coup against former King Farouk.

The council, then fifteen younger army officers resentful of excesses and corruption in the Egyptian Government and the poor showing of the Egyptian Army in the Palestine hostility, chose General Naguib as its nominal leader because of his widespread popularity.

The real power of the group, however, still lay with Colonel Nasser, officials here said. They contended that it was the dual nature of the Egyptian leadership—with General Naguib only the figure-head—that brought the rivalry to a climax.

Reproduced with permission of the copyright owner. Further reproduction prohibited without permission.