LONDON, March 31 — The British Government charged today that some "ex-Nazis and former SS officers" were in Egypt assisting in the development and production of "sabotage weapons" and instructing Egyptians in "sabotage and guerrilla techniques."

The threat of the growing influence of German mercenary officers and arms specialists in Egypt has engaged British public opinion in recent months.

A Government spokesman absolved the West German regime of responsibility by declaring that Bonn had "no formal control" over these activities.
