NARRIMAN IS MARRIED

Former Queen of Egypt Wed to Dr. Adham al Nakib

Special to The New York Times.

CAIRO, May 3—Egypt's former Queen, 20-year-old Narriman Hanem Sadek, was married at noon today to Dr. Adham al Nakib , 27-year-old Alexandria surgeon, at the bride's home in suburban Heliopolis.

Narriman was married to King Farouk on May 6, 1951, followed him into exile when the army seized power in July, 1952, and returned to Cairo a year ago to begin divorce proceedings. The divorce decree, which was granted in February, gave custody of their 2-year-old son to Farouk who is living in Europe.

The bridegroom is the son of Dr. Ahmed al Nakib, a former intimate of Farouk, who was sentenced to fifteen years' imprisonment by the revolutionary tribunal for corruption of Egypt's political life.

Today's ceremony was a simple one, with only members of the two families present. It was in sharp contrast with Narriman's elaborate royal wedding three days short of three years ago.
