El-Malakh's Brother Sees Rift
New York Times (1857-Current file); Jun 8, 1954; ProQuest Historical Newspapers The New York Times (1851 - 200
pg. 8

tion concealed in the chambers known and not failing because of dissension."

He said his brother was planning a trip to the United States "as soon as possible."

El-Malakh's Brother Sees Rift

A brother of Kamal el-Malakh, discoverer of the funerary solar boat of Cheops, said here yesterday that he did not think the committee named to investigate the discovery would survive.

Ragaei el-Malakh, 29 years old, who is a Fulbright and Egyptian Government scholar studying graduate economics at Rutgers University, New Brunswick, N. J., said that "dissension created the committee and dissension among its members will end it."

"It is in the interests of Egypt to go ahead with the opening of the Cheops' chambers and to do it soon," he said. "This will show the world that my country is cooperating to make the informa-

Reproduced with permission of the copyright owner. Further reproduction prohibited without permission.