Special to The New York Times.

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt, Feb. 9 —Representatives of Islam and Christianity from fourteen countries met here today to form an organization devoted to strengthening understanding between the two faiths.

At a press conference opening the six-day meeting of the executive committee of the Continuing Committee on Moslem-Christian Cooperation, Garland Hopkins, secretary of the committee, outlined the history of the movement and the aims of the present session. Twenty-eight delegates representing the United States, Canada, Egypt, France, Greece, Indonesia, Iran, Iraq, Italy, Lebanon, Pakistan, Spain and Syria will participate here in drafting a constitution and electing permanent officers for the committee.

The committee was set up last April at a meeting of forty Christians and forty Moslems from twenty-two countries at Bhamdoun, Lebanon.
