CEYLON DEBATES BASES

Issue Is Revived After Attack by Britain on Egypt

Special to The New York Times.

COLOMBO, Ceylon, Nov. 1—The question of British naval and air bases in Ceylon, Trincomalee and Katunayake has been revived as an issue following the British attack on Egypt.

The bases are in the process of being transferred to the Ceylonese Government. A delegation of military chiefs from Ceylon was scheduled to meet a British group last week to decide on facilities to be afforded the British after Ceylon finally takes over the bases. This meeting was postponed because of the international situation.

The leftist Parliamentary Opposition in Ceylon has demanded that the bases be "sealed" so that the British could not use them in the present Mideast conflict.
