MOVE RESENTED IN ITALY

Britain and France Accused of Keeping Allies in Dark

Special to The New York Times.

ROME, Nov. 1—Almost unanimously Italian newspapers of all political tendencies today condemned British-French armed intervention in Egypt.

It was generally agreed that the solidarity existing among the Allies in the Atlantic Pact could not be invoked to condone unilateral armed action. More then one newspaper emphasized that neither Britain nor France consulted Italy and the other Allies.

There are fifty thousands Italians in Cairo alone and it is feared that they may be victims not only of air raids but also of Egyptian reprisals.

Prayers for peace were offered during two special masses in Vatican City. The first was said in the parish church of Saint Anne by Msgr. Pieter Canisius van Lierde, the Pope's sacristan and vicar for Vatican City.
