Soviet Hint Last Week On Egypt Is Revealed

Soviet leaders may have known as early as last Friday that war was brewing in the Middle East.

This possibility appears to be indicated by a Tass dispatch dated last Friday, allegedly sent from Rome that appeared in Pravda and other Soviet newspapers last Saturday. Quoting "local informed journalistic circles," the dispatch said it was reported that the British and French foreign ministers "reached agreement Oct. 23 concerning the beginning in the nearest future of armed intervention in Egypt."

The dispatch made no mention of Israel. Last Sunday, however, another Tass dispatch from Rome declared that Israeli authorities were hurriedly carrying out a broad mobilization of reserves and transport facilities.
