Jordan Disclaimer Reported

Special to The New York Times

LONDON, June 8—According to official British sources, Jordanian military spokesmen conceded in Amman yesterday that no British or American planes had been seen in Jordan.

This was in direct conflict with earlier Jordanian claims that British and American planes had supported Israel in the fighting. These charges, branded a lie by London and Washington, have been repeated daily by Egypt.

A Foreign Office spokesman said today, without elaboration:

"I can tell you that yesterday, at an official briefing at Jordan general headquarters, foreign attachés were told that the Jordanians had 'no knowledge of any British or American aircraft operating over Jordan.'"
